

Viewpoint Censorship on the Internet

National Religious Broadcasters launched Internet Freedom Watch to bring greater attention to online censorship, challenge Silicon Valley to uniformly practice its professed commitment to free speech, and explore possible public policy options that may exist to address the loss of internet freedom.

This timeline illustrates examples of suppression of Christian and conservative views on the internet by private corporations that are not constrained by the First Amendment. The timeline is not exhaustive, but merely representative. For an updated timeline, visit InternetFreedomWatch.org.

March 2019

Dr. Michael Brown's YouTube channel demonetized after Google executive responds to employees upset over Brown video explaining the Christian teaching on same-sex marriage.

February 2019

Human rights activist Faith McDonnell banned from Facebook after posting famous photo of Coptic martyrs. Although initially called a "permanent" ban, Facebook later restored her account after media attention.

December 2018

Franklin Graham gets 24-hour Facebook ban for 2016 post asserting biblical values on gender in response to singer Bruce Springsteen's cancellation of North Carolina concert. Facebook later said the ban was a mistake and apologized to Graham.

November 2018

Radio talk show host and former congressional candidate Jesse Kelly banned from Twitter without any explanation.

Instagram deletes an image by Founders Ministries, "Only Men Can Be Pastors," claiming the post was "hate speech."

October 2018

U.S. Senate candidate from Tennessee Marsha Blackburn's ad, "Stop The Mob," rejected by Google Ads as "shocking content."

Facebook rejects pro-life ads by Susan B. Anthony List about babies born prematurely.

August 2018

PragerU announces that it is being "heavily censored" on Facebook after videos were blocked as "hate speech." Facebook later apologized and restored the content

Because it "related to politics or an issue of national importance," Facebook denies an ad that Steven Solomon, a pastor and Army veteran, wished to use to promote his radio program that said, "Speak the truth, Love God, Defend America"

Facebook suspends popular blogger Elizabeth Johnston ("The Activist Mommy") for unspecified "hate speech." Facebook later apologized and restored content it had removed

- July 2018 ● Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-Fla.) confirms that he filed an FEC complaint against Twitter due to an apparent shadow ban of his account. Reps. Jim Jordan (R-Ohio), Mark Meadows (N.C.), and Devin Nunes (R-Calif.) were reportedly also so treated by Twitter
- June 2018 ● Facebook blocks Dr. Robert Gagnon, previously on the faculty of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, for criticizing a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation video that promoted homosexuality and nudity to young children
- May 2018 ● Amazon denies Alliance Defending Freedom access to its charitable AmazonSmile program based on a categorization of the controversial Southern Poverty Law Center
- April 2018 ● Facebook rejects an ad from Franciscan University of Steubenville featuring the historic San Damiano Cross because it was deemed “shocking, sensational, or excessively violent”
- January 2018 ● Google’s YouTube flags and deletes the live stream of NRBTv for an unspecified Community Guidelines violation. YouTube also inflicts a three-month strike on NRBTv’s account
- November 2017 ● Twitter informs radio talk show host Erick Erickson that his tweet related to the debate about transgenderism “has been flagged for possible violations” of its “hateful conduct policy and/or German laws”
- October 2017 ● Twitter blocks a political ad Rep. Marsha Blackburn (R-Tenn.) attempted to promote because it deemed her reference to Planned Parenthood’s documented “sale of baby body parts” to be “inflammatory”
- August 2017 ● Google’s YouTube demonetizes hundreds of videos produced by Dr. Michael Brown, host of Line of Fire radio show, and targets “controversial religious” content
- July 2017 ● Twitter blocks tweets and retweets of AT&T’s public policy blog expressing an opinion contrary to its own during a “Day of Action” supporting “common carrier” Title II federal regulation over internet service providers
- Facebook temporarily blocks more than 20 pages of Catholic organizations and individuals followed by millions worldwide
- May 2017 ● Twitter makes Live Action, a pro-life organization, ineligible to advertise on its platform until removal of “offensive” content
- March 2017 ● Citing disagreement with views expressed in four videos by Pure Passion TV on sexuality, Vimeo removes all 850 videos of the ministry and closes its account
- January 2017 ● Amazon denies D. James Kennedy Ministries access to its charitable AmazonSmile program based on a categorization of the controversial Southern Poverty Law Center
- October 2016 ● Prager University announces that Google’s YouTube is censoring many of its educational videos by placing them in “restricted mode,” which flags and prevents them from being accessed freely

- July 2016 ● Google's YouTube temporarily blocks a Center for Security Policy video critical of the Muslim Brotherhood, jihad, and Sharia law
- May 2016 ● Gizmodo, a technology blog, reports evidence of Facebook workers censoring conservative content off of and injecting preferred articles into its influential trending news feed
- November 2015 ● Facebook blocks postings by Vanderbilt University professor, Dr. Carol Swain, for over 26 hours after liberal student activists organized complaints about her religious and moral viewpoints
- Google's YouTube terminates account of Olive Tree Ministries after the ministry posted an interview about persecution of Christians in the Middle East. YouTube reinstated the account 3 days later after media inquiries
- August 2015 ● Facebook temporarily blocks user postings about a report on illegal immigration by the Center for Immigration Studies
- April 2015 ● Responding to pressure from complaints, GoFundMe deletes fundraising campaigns for Sweet Cakes by Melissa and Arlene's Flowers — companies that had declined to provide services for same-sex weddings — and then changed its terms of service to support its decision
- October 2014 ● Twitter blocks users from linking to a petition supporting the Houston pastors whose sermons were subpoenaed by the city because the pastors supported a referendum against a gender-neutral restrooms ordinance
- April 2014 ● Citing a violation of its Community Standards, Facebook removes satirical post about immigration and Nevada rancher standoff by FOX's Todd Starnes
- March 2014 ● Facebook temporarily bans evangelist Ray Comfort after he posts a photo of Westboro Baptist Church signs in an article in which Comfort encourages Christians to distance themselves from Westboro
- After the number of "shares" his stories receive on Facebook drastically drop, Lt. Col. Allen West blogs about whether Facebook is just promoting sponsored stories or is actually censoring conservative content
- December 2013 ● Twitter blocks users from posting a link to a petition drive supporting Phil Robertson who had been suspended from the Duck Dynasty show by A&E after voicing his biblically-based views on homosexuality
- August 2013 ● Citing a violation of Community Standards regarding religion, Facebook temporarily blocks administrators of the Military with PTSD page
- Summer 2013 ● Citing a violation of its Community Standards, Facebook puts a 12-hour suspension on the page of a UNC-Wilmington professor making arguments against same-sex marriage

- July 2013 ● Citing a violation of its Community Standards because of a post which favorably mentioned the NRA, Chick-fil-A, Paula Deen, Cracker Barrel, the Gaithers, and the Gideon Bible, Facebook removes the post and temporarily blocks access to the account of Todd Starnes, host of FOX News & Commentary

Apple selectively decides its iOS software dictionary function will not auto-correct certain controversial words like “virginity,” “fornicate,” “drunken,” or “abortion”
- June 2013 ● Citing its policy against “excessively objectionable or crude content,” Apple removes from its App Store a Setting Captives Free app that promotes freedom from homosexuality
- March 2013 ● Facebook reportedly bans a Texas man for posting the phrase “seize the day with baby Obama,” while leaving up posts calling for the killing of Sarah Palin
- January 2013 ● Facebook threatens content control by issuing warnings or temporarily suspending bloggers’ accounts for alleged “spam” when bloggers simply shared content on multiple like-minded pages

Citing “security concerns,” Facebook temporarily closes the page of an Israeli journalist after he posted criticism of the Palestinian Authority, restores the page 24 hours later, but deletes the article in question

Citing a violation of its Statement of Rights and Responsibilities, Facebook removes a post by Chicks on the Right that was critical of the White House press secretary
- October 2012 ● Facebook removes a post critical of President Obama’s handling of the Benghazi attack and puts a 24-hour block on the account of Special Operations Speaks PAC
- July 2012 ● Facebook temporarily removes Gov. Mike Huckabee’s post in support of Chick-fil-A
- May 2012 ● Google’s YouTube pulls video of a youth minister who warned of the same-sex marriage movement in America
- November 2010 ● Apple removes Chuck Colson’s Manhattan Declaration from its iTunes App Store

About the John Milton Project

Internet Freedom Watch is an expansion of NRB’s pioneering work in establishing the John Milton Project for Free Speech in 2011, which first raised concerns about internet censorship and urged Silicon Valley to adopt the Free Speech Charter for the Internet, a model to serve the interests of both free speech and free enterprise.

A project of the National Religious Broadcasters